Web Design > I've had people tell me that I have no business understanding web design, but I say, "Well, why do you have a business?" > > —Steven Spielberg, quoted in Inc. magazine, November 1998 * * * Fearless is a word I've heard very often since I began designing websites. Why? Because it's important to be fearless in your web design. This is a wonderful attribute to possess in order to deal with the Internet and online marketing. In regard to web design, most of us do not have enough skills, knowledge, or experience to design a website properly. But that doesn't mean we can't work on a site that looks excellent. When I was in college, I used to design and edit text-based magazines for a few years. My college had a good graphic design program and it was a wonderful experience for me. I still admire the wonderful imagery, layout, and typography of magazines. At one point, I was tasked with creating an amazing graphic for a student newspaper. (This paper decided to have a very unique look, including word balloons over each page.) To me, it was a really huge challenge and I worked on the project for a couple of days. At the end of the project, I was happy. But the next day, I received an e-mail that

Friday, November 18, 2009 I have always been fascinated by dolls. Perhaps it was always my mother who passed on her fascination, for she used to make dolls from clay long before I can remember. She would dress them up for holidays and would also take the opportunity to dress them up every time we visited her house. As we grew older, I made my own dolls, but eventually I stopped in favour of toys. My dolls have come and gone over the years. Some of my favourites I have kept over the years. I had my first lead doll when I was about 8 years old. This was a lead doll whose head, arms and legs were polystyrene, while her face was a sheet of foam. When I needed a doll for special occasions, I made my own, out of foam or a piece of sponge. I have since moved on to make my own plastic dolls out of left over pieces of foam and a bit of fabric. I have even begun making custom dolls for my clients. I have always loved to pose my dolls and any opportunity to dress them up is exciting to me. I give my dolls names and I have a few favourite dolls that stay with me. As we went through our sewing projects this week, we decided to make each other a doll - with each a different doll in mind. I used the lovely new pattern from Hannah Montana, the Hannah Montana Winter White dress, which I adore.

Photoshop Elements to Photoshop Photoshop Elements includes many tools to help with everyday tasks, including the ability to create multiple layers and masks.
